

Lidstone & Company Welcomes Tomasz Zworski as Senior Counsel

Lidstone & Company is pleased to announce the addition of Tomasz Zworski as the firm's new Senior Counsel starting September 2, 2025.

Tom has spent his entire legal career representing local governments as well as individual elected officials, municipal staff, and police officers. For the last 15 years, Tom was the City Solicitor at the City of Victoria. Before that, Tom articulated and practiced at the City of Vancouver's law department.

Tom has appeared on behalf of municipalities before the Supreme Court of Canada and all levels of BC courts, as well as before numerous administrative boards and tribunals. As a municipal in-house lawyer, Tom provided advice on a broad range of legal issues involving municipalities, including constitutional law, relationships with First Nations, construction projects and complex procurement, elections, governance, conflicts of interest, freedom of information and privacy, contract negotiation and drafting, bylaw enforcement, property taxation, policing, civil liability claims, as well as land-use matters and agreements. In addition, as an adjunct professor at the University of Victoria, Tom teaches municipal law and sustainability at UVic's Faculty of Law.

At Lidstone & Company, Tom will focus on judicial reviews, chambers applications, appeals, and administrative tribunal hearings, as well as providing legal opinions on governance, conflicts of interests, and other matters, and mentoring junior lawyers.

When not practicing law, Tom is an avid sailor, amateur wildlife photographer, and a scuba diver.

Lidstone & Company, with offices in Vancouver and Calgary, acts throughout Canada for local governments and related entities such as municipal subsidiaries and police boards, as well as libraries, school board, health entities, and colleges and universities.
